“ I treasure the description of Peter’s death by his children, who with his loving wife surrounded his hospital bed and watched Pete as he opened his eyes for the last time and entered eternity. Like all his friends and family, I feel there are too many memories of him to express right now. Yet I recall some old ones like hiring me to work in his factory on Belmont Ave., and asking me to be best man at his wedding; of playing baseball, tennis, and even hockey at his country home; and more recently playing card games in Hampshire. I admire too Nora’s description of Pete during his last days, with his rosary in his hands, sometimes awake and praying and sometimes dozing, but always close to God.

After having his eyes closed for most of the day, Dad opened them wide and bright and without blinking . . .the way they always looked when he was smiling. He had such a look of contentment and of amazement and of "so that is what You look like Lord!" on His face. He was very obviously gazing with joy at the Beatific Vision, as he was being welcomed to be home with Jesus. A few moments later during his joyful gazing he went home! Praised be God!

“ He is a man after God's own heart! . . . He is a soldier for Christ, for his family, for the most vulnerable of all God's creation, for his nation, and for God's Kingdom!
